CONGRESSIONAL STANDING:

Active member of Research and Development Subcommittee of Armed Services. Sided with Defense Department against building improved manned bomber and has authored minority report on this issue (an almost unheard of event under Vinson's chairmanship, but seemed to be well tolerated by Mr. Vinson). Bright, articulate, hard worker. Held in highest regard by fellow congressmen.

POLITICAL INTERESTS:

Unique as a democrat representing predominantly rural upstate New York. Considered a liberal and strong backer of Administration. Almost copped gubernatorial nomination in 1962 but lost out to Morgenthau. Has strong Senatorial aspirations. Fought Keating hard on Cuba issue, saying he had full faith in intelligence and if Keating really had something important, he should turn it over rather than make political game out of it. Early supporter of Robert Kennedy for Vice President. Just about had democratic nomination to run against Keating in 1964 (30 county chairmen in hip pocket) when Robert Kennedy entered race.
